"ARA" which features distinct different vocal styles, some incredible proficient string work and memorable melodies." - Matt Jensen / divideandconquermusic.com

These songs are written about being lost, lonely, and outcast and they examine grief, desperation, and other hardships, but they also sound and feel like triumph; they speak of events you never experienced, but yet you feel included; they are historically nostalgic in sound, but also lyrically relevant to today's political and social climate.

"Drunk in Cardiff" is the perfect opener for this celtic punk album. Upbeat number showcasing tin whistle and electric guitar" - CelticFolkPunk.com

"The Pikeys were an easy band to appreciate. At the very least these are some great drinking songs but beneath the surface are meaningful lyrics and ideas that should not go unnoticed."

"The Pikeys have given us a record to remind us that when things are really, really bleak we can find inspiration in the dogged perseverance of the impoverished and the oppressed and humanity's utter refusal to be defeated. This record informs us that war is hell, life is hard, and injustice sucks - But by damn, we will survive; and we will laugh all the way home from the pub retelling the stories that affirm our fighting spirit. And if you don't agree, well Feck You and put up your fists, Friend!"
